ASSAILANTS MUST GO TO JAIL OR OCCOQUAN

Serious Offenders Will No Longer Escape With Fines, Says Judge Pugh.

Absolute jail sentences in practically all assault cases are being imposed by Judge James L. Pugh in the United States branch of the Police Court.

Judge Pugh declared he does not propose any longer to allow persons convicted of serious charges of assault to go free upon the payment of a fine. He said there has been too many cases of persons getting off with the payment of a fine, and that he believed if people knew that a term in jail or at Occoquan awaited them if they committed such offenses the fact would tend to check such outbreaks.

Attorney Pleads for Fine.
Attorney A. E. Scott, colored, argued to the court in the case of Raymond Jackson, colored, who had been given a sentence of six months at Occoquan on a charge of assaulting a little girl, that a fine ought to be imposed. He declared to the court that if the man was allowed to pay a fine he would be better off at work than down at the workhouse.

"No, I think he will be better off down there," said the court. "Ninety per cent of the prisoners who are sentenced to jail or Occoquan here are treated better at those institutions than they are at home."

Manufacturers in U. S. IN NEED OF DYE STUFFS
Textile Workers and Makers of Paper, Ink and Other Products Are Handicapped.

American textile manufacturers, as well as makers of paper, ink, varnish, pigments and leather articles, are feeling the scarcity of artificial dyes more acutely each day, according to Commercial Agent Thomas H. Norton, in a special report to Secretary Redfield, issued today. Mr. Norton has been making an exhaustive investigation of the entire subject.

Stock Rapidly Diminishing.
The stock of dyes of German origin in the United States, Mr. Norton says, is rapidly diminishing, and probably will disappear before the end of July. Two cargoes for which Great Britain granted free passage permits are being held up for export permission from the German government. Those cargoes would be sufficient to supply the needs of American manufacturers for a month or two.

Personal to Rivermen.
Capt. Chapman Slye, master of the steamer Frederick de Barry of the Potomac and Chesapeake line, has gone to his home in St. Marys county, Md., to spend a short vacation before taking command of the big excursion steamer St. Johns.

Capt. Phil Harbour, pilot of the steamer Wakefield, has been transferred to the command of the de Barry, and Capt. J. D. Bagott has been appointed pilot of the Wakefield.

Albert Lacey, steward aboard the tug Edith Goddard Winslow, has successfully passed his examination before the United States steamboat inspectors, and has been granted a license as a pilot on the Potomac river.

POTOMAC RIVER FISH SCARCE THIS SEASON

Catch Poorest in History. Due to Methods of Not Allowing Young to Reach Spawning Grounds.

Potomac river and Chesapeake bay fishermen now are beginning to suffer from their methods of sweeping the river out of the river in years past, and allowing none or very few to reach the spawning grounds. The present shad fishing season in the Potomac, just closing, has been one of the poorest in history, and the fishermen has no one to blame but himself, according to officials of the bureau of fisheries.

The Bryans point fish hatchery, a short distance this side of Marshall Hall, Md., has closed one of its poorest seasons, due to the fact that the fishermen could not get the fish. Very few fish this year reached the Potomac river spawning grounds, which lies between Marshall Hall and this city.

Small and Undersized.
Even the few fish that were taken this year were small and undersized, weighing from one and a half to two pounds, while the adult fish should weigh, according to the fisheries experts, from four to five pounds. These small, undersized fish, or "skips," as they are known, were particularly noticeable in the Potomac river fisheries.

While methods must be found to increase the fish supply in this territory, the fisheries officials about by the acts of the fishermen covering a number of years. At one time it was the practice to stretch the nets across the river so that the fish had absolutely no chance whatever of getting up the river to the spawning grounds. They were caught up in the nets, small fish and all, and carried away in boats. The small fish which could not be used were not turned back into the river, but were used as bait.

Restrictions Advocated.
The officials do advocate, however, restrictions of the nets and limitations on the size of the fish caught, so that the fish may become adults before they are taken. Although there is no absolute data showing the age at which a shad becomes an adult, it is roughly estimated at four years. The bureau is now engaged in collecting data to determine this.

When the shad hatch in the spawning grounds they go down to deep water, coming up each year. In their migrations to the spawning grounds they become entangled in the fishermen's nets, and, small or large, they go along to their destruction, for the fishermen never think of turning back into the water undersized fish so that the supply may be conserved.

COL. HARVEY COMMENDS COURSE OF PRESIDENT

Magazine Editor Here on Recreation Foresees No War With Germany.

Heartily commendation of the course of President Wilson in the critical stage of relations with Germany, as a result of the Lusitania disaster and loss of other American lives during the German submarine warfare, and prediction that there will be no war with Germany, are given by Col. George Harvey, magazine editor, who recently made his peace with the President after a notable estrangement.

Col. Harvey is here on a visit of recreation.

"The President's note to Germany following the sinking of the Lusitania suited its purpose admirably, in my opinion," said Col. Harvey. "I can see no reason to apprehend war with Germany."

Not Optimistic Over Business.
"I have not been able to observe any general improvement in business conditions through the country," added Col. Harvey. "There has been an impetus in some lines, necessarily, particularly in those lines which supply war munitions."

REPAIRS FOR LANDING PLACES.
Grinders Wharf, Marshall Hall and Alexandria Piers Will Be Stronger.
J. W. Carpenter, owner of Grinders wharf in Mattowoman creek, Md., is having the structure rebuilt and a pile driver will shortly go from this city to drive fender and mooring piles about the structure. Grinders is one of the important wharves on the route of the Potomac river steamers, and the steamer W. L. Davis makes daily trips to it from this city and Alexandria.

Repairs are being pushed on the pier at Marshall Hall, and before the opening of the excursion season, at the end of this month, the work will be completed. The repair work to the Norfolk and Washington line pier at Alexandria has been completed.
